

Market performance

Equity markets performed strongly in 2021 amid very solid global growth. Demand for commodities was extraordinarily strong. Oil (WTI Crude) jumped 59% to $75.21 a barrel. This helped boost earnings and prices of energy companies. The tech sector continued to be bought. Trillion dollar franchises Apple Inc., Microsoft and Alphabet (Google) returned 35%, 52% and 65% respectively, contributing significantly to the performance of the MSCI World Index.

The first half of the year was about investing in anything except government bonds. Skepticism started to develop during the second half as China rolled out new policies, which included fining tech companies for antitrust and limiting the leverage ratio of property developers. In addition, variants of COVID-19 created waves of rising cases. Moreover, inflation seemed non-transitory causing investor expectations of rate hikes to push forward. Investors steered away from the epicenters by selling emerging markets and small caps but generally remained constructive.

The 10-year Government of Canada bond yield rose in 2021 but finished at 1.42% at year end, a relatively low level for 2021. Inflation, on the other hand, was close to 4% in Canada for the year.

Portfolio performance

Throughout the year we favoured an equity tilt within most of our portfolios, while owning very little government bonds. It was an unusual environment where earnings and inflation were booming and interest rates were at the floor levels. Even though there was bad news occasionally and markets dipped temporarily, we remained committed to this positioning throughout the year as we expect the global economic recovery to last longer. Interest rates were hugging zero, the money supply was expanding, and consumers were motivated, just to name a few reasons why we believe the recovery was still at the beginning phase.

Inside each portfolio, credit out-performed rates and value out-performed growth. We were overweight credit and underweight rates. In terms of style, we were diverse in both growth and value.

The MER includes the management fee, the insurance cost for segregated fund guarantees, operating expenses and the applicable taxes of the fund. Policyholders do not pay for these expenses directly. The MER reduces the return of the investment. The Manager, at its discretion, may waive or absorb a portion of the operating expenses otherwise payable by a Fund class. Outlook and positioning

Interest rates are at their bottom, the next move is higher and that should not surprise anyone. Some investors are hung up on when. Judging by economic growth, unemployment rates and inflation, we believe economies are ready for higher rates. So, anytime is fine as long as it is gradual and does not present a shock. We are confident central banks will be managing the hike cycle carefully. How much higher? We suspect the terminal rate is around 2%. The terminal rate is a central bank's maximum lending rate at the end of a hike cycle. 2% is substantially lower than normal, but as we are in a "new normal" where debt outstanding is significantly bigger, lower is actually reasonable.

Economies typically start to slow as interest rates peak. We expect central banks to take their time to hike rates to 2%, possibly two if not three years. Given 2% is a low hurdle compared to corporate earnings growth, equity should continue to perform. Obviously certain sectors would fare better. Long-dated bonds, both 10-year Canada government bonds and U.S. Treasuries, are currently yielding below the terminal rate. We would wait for the overshoot to add bonds.
