PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The year ended with a bout of volatility as sentiment deteriorated rapidly and investors focused on the downside risks to the global economy. The market quickly extrapolated the lagged impact of headwinds stemming from rising interest rates, trade tariffs, Brexit and the U.S. government shutdown as volatility returned. While economic growth may have peaked, the silver lining to the pullback is that risk assets have become more attractive.

Over the period, the portfolio benefitted from its underweight allocation to equity and corresponding overweight allocation to fixed income given the financial market volatility. The portfolio had been positioned accordingly as we had highlighted difficulties in finding attractive risk-reward opportunities in equities during prior periods. The portfolio's U.S. dollar exposure also provided a tailwind to performance relative to the broad benchmark.

Within equities, performance was driven by strong security selection in the communication services and information technology sectors, while energy-exposed businesses were among the largest detractors in absolute terms. Within communication services, Verizon Communications was a strong performer as shares rose about 5% during the quarter in local currency terms. Its quarterly earnings release showed continued improvement in fundamentals as it added more phone subscribers than expected and announced lower capital expenditure for the upcoming year. The company will continue to deploy its new 5G wireless technology which we believe will continue to support subscriber additions going forward. Technology sector holding Broadcom also performed well and saw its shares rise 3% during the quarter in local currency terms. The semiconductor maker announced a strong quarter and issued strong guidance for 2019, specifically as it relates to free cash flow expectations. Energy holdings Viper Energy Partners and Black Stone Minerals were each among the top five detractors over the period. Their share prices declined about 38% and 15%, respectively, during the quarter as concerns of slowing economic growth weighed on oil prices.

Within fixed income, longer duration positioning contributed to performance as interest rates fell during the period. This was offset by holdings in preferred shares, which negatively impacted security selection as their performance was relatively weak.

As quality fundamental investors, our focus remains on identifying durable, compounding businesses through our disciplined bottom-up investment process. Overall, equity valuations have normalized in recognition of slowing economic growth, central bank tightening and the late stage economy which has raised concerns regarding future economic growth prospects. This has created opportunities to apply our fundamental research process to identify attractive risk/reward opportunities. Following the market volatility last year and particularly in the fourth quarter of 2018, companies with higher cyclical exposure have begun to look more attractive. We will continue to monitor these developments, remain patient and be ready to act if a compelling risk-adjusted return opportunity presents itself.
