PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

We entered 2020 thinking the market was valued fairly reasonably. At the time, we were finding opportunities in cyclical areas of the market, such as select industrial, energy, utilities and consumer staples businesses. While much of the market downturn has been due to concerns over COVID-19's impact on the economy, it has been further compounded by actions such as Russia's decision to not work with OPEC to better match oil supply with reduced demand. Saudi Arabia retaliated by announcing it would flood markets with cheap crude. This had an impact on the price of oil, which suffered the worst losses since the start of the 1991 Gulf War.

The Fund returned -18.9% for the three months ending March 31, 2020. Over the quarter, Gilead Sciences Inc. and Microsoft Corp. were top contributors. Gilead Sciences is a biopharmaceutical company that engages in the research, development, and commercialization of medicines in areas of unmet medical need. The company has been considered a front runner to develop a vaccine for COVID-19. The global pandemic has highlighted Gilead's ability to bring new drug therapies to market based on its existing intellectual property rights. Investor sentiment has materially shifted during the quarter, which has positively impacted the shares. Microsoft develops software applications and services. The company has performed well through the sell off as it is relatively insulated from the economic slowdown. Over the mid to long-term, we believe it can grow free cash flow at a mid-teens rate, driven by business application growth and other platforms, as well as cloud-based infrastructure services growth from Azure Cloud Services.

Our oil related holdings have suffered in this bear market. Demand for oil has slowed as economies around the world grind to a halt to limit the spread of COVID-19, while supply has accelerated following a breakdown of OPEC+ and failed negotiations to limit production. These unprecedented and simultaneous shocks to demand and supply have translated into a weaker fundamental outlook for oil related businesses. Black Stone Minerals L.P. is a royalty business that engages in the exploration of oil and gas in the U.S. The company was impacted by weak oil prices during the quarter. We consider the royalty model to be higher quality relative to other energy firms given the limited capital spending requirements.

Over the quarter, we eliminated a position in Gilead Sciences, Inc., and initiated a position in Ambev SA Sponsored ADR.

We saw the range of stock returns (technically referred to as dispersion) to be much narrower than we typically see in downturns. Let us be clear – the market is faced with an increased uncertainty of binary outcomes, equities and other assets, which could face continued downward pressure should the severity of the virus accelerate. Early into this recent drawdown, traditionally defensive positions like utilities outperformed, especially as yields fell. Many central banks, including those in Canada, the U.S., Australia and China have reduced interest rates, while bond yields drop to record lows. Concerns around COVID-19 pose risks to corporate profits, leading to a decline in global equities. With lowered equity prices, stocks are an increasingly attractive option for investors.

We have taken a more cautious position in the portfolio than we had going into 2020. This results in buying businesses where we have more confidence in the downside. We have focused our efforts on businesses that generate strong cash flow, have the balance sheets to weather a challenging economic environment and are run by impressive management teams that can allocate capital effectively. Despite weaker economic growth around the world, we are finding high-quality businesses that offer attractive risk/reward investment opportunities at valuations we have not seen in years. As fundamental investors, our focus remains on identifying durable, high-quality businesses that can compound shareholder value through our disciplined bottom-up investment process.
